PROFIL

Reflection as a basis for development

Getting to know and understanding my counterparts and their motives through active listening and systematic questioning – that is something that always fills me with joy. I am committed to providing participants with impulses for their personal development and for realizing their potential through concise and visual communication.

My experience in cooperating with people from different professions and positions helps me to quickly empathize with different work environments and to approach participants on an equal footing. It is important to me to create a trusting atmosphere that also includes laughter. For me, honest, authentic cooperation is the foundation for mutual success.

In the professional context as well as in my personal life, people perceive me to be empathic, analytically strong, and appreciative.
